
ANN F. FISHER

EXECUTIVE COACH

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

- Executive Performance for Business Results
- Executive Talent Development
- High Potential Leaders
- Global/International Assignments and Transitions
- Leading in Multi-Cultural and Diverse Organizations
- Top Level Job Transitions
- Interpersonal & Communication Skills
- Personal Career, and Life Development

CLIENTS

- A.T. Kearney
- Avaya
- Business Week
- Leo Burnett
- Nike
- PepsiCo
- Wrigley
- Yahoo

LEVEL/TYPE

- CEO
- EVP
- SVP
- GM
- VP

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Ann F. Fisher is an executive coach with Executive Coaching Network, Inc. (EXCN). She chose to become a coach after 24 years of corporate business experience, 12 of them in an international and leadership role. Her most recent position as general manager, Pacific, for Newsweek International, based in Hong Kong, required that she manage both multi-culturally and virtually across the Asia region. Prior to her work with Newsweek International, she held management positions in advertising and publishing in Asia and the U.S. with Ted Bates, J. Walter Thompson, and Time Inc.

Ann's clients are individuals who are called to lead in their organizations, who want to have a significant impact, and who work in the global arena. She particularly enjoys working with women looking to craft a new style of leadership and with individuals to create and manage change at work and in their lives.

Ann graduated from Williams College, in the second class to admit women. She took courses toward an M.B.A. at NYU while working. Her coach training is from Coach University. Ann is a Certified Professional Behavioral Analyst, trained in the DISC assessment and is also trained in Hogan & Lominger assessments. She is a member of the International Coach Federation and has served on the nominating committee of the Chicago Coach Federation. She was included in an article on coaching in Time Magazine.

